IMPACT STATEMENTS

Research Supporting the Impact of Arts Programming

In the report, Champions of Change: The Impact of the Arts on Learning, published jointly by the President's Committee on the Arts and Humanities and the Arts Education Partnership, several independent researchers concluded that engagement in the arts nurtures the development of cognitive, social and personal competencies. Arts programs can increase academic achievement, help decrease youth involvement in delinquent behavior and improve youth attitudes about themselves and the future.

Specifically, researchers found that learning in and through the arts:

- Contributes significantly to improve critical thinking, problem-solving and decision-making.
- Fosters higher-order thinking skills of analysis, synthesis, and evaluation.
- Regularly engages multiple skills and abilities.
- Develops a person's imagination and judgment.

Learning in and through the arts can even help students overcome the obstacles of disadvantaged backgrounds. For example, one of the Champions of Change reports, using data from a study that followed over 25,000 students for 10 years, found that students consistently involved in the arts show significantly higher levels of mathematics proficiency by grade 12 - regardless of their socioeconomic status. (Source: NEA: Publication – "How the arts can enhance after school programs.")

Research Supporting the Impact of Exercise & Physical Fitness Programming

One in three kids in the United States is overweight or obese. Obesity can also have serious ramifications for kids' cognitive development. Further, both childhood obesity and poor academic performance tend to be clustered in schools with a high percentage of lower-income, minority students, creating a student health issue that is especially problematic in those communities.

There is a growing body of evidence indicating that physical activity and fitness can benefit both the health and academic performance of children, both immediate and long-term. Over time, as children engage in physical activity, they can have additional positive effects on academics in mathematics, reading, and writing. A research project conducted with 24 elementary schools, showed that adding sessions of physical activity could have long-term benefits, such as improved academic performance.
